

Research for the Current Practice and Future Response

Tomohide ATSUMI, Ph.D.

Osaka University, Japan

Nippon Volunteer Network Active in Disaster

Why am I presenting today?

- PRACTICE has THE FIRST PRIORITY! If I could add something here

- Not because I have already started any research by ourselves, but because, as a researcher, I think that we should start research. However, research should not be for the research, but for the current practice and future response. Today, I would like to propose, not only to archive IACCR activities, but also
- 1. to start ethnographic research in each area via practice
 - Participant Observation, Document Analyses, Interview...
- 2. to establish or connect us to an already-established network for data/findings exchange, for example, the following issues.

Practical Questions

- How do you cover when your volunteers suffer from the virus (insurance)
- How did you motivate citizens, especially young students, to respond seriously to the Coronavirus.
- How did you take care of the elderly people and people with disability, if it is hard to see them directly? Sent messages? Chat over SNS?
- Can we establish a model for future bio-hazard response?

Can Research Propose Any Ideas?

Academic Questions, possibly related to practice

- ▶ Psychological responses/care
- ▶ Social Psychological issues
 - ▶ Prejudice
 - ▶ Do not have any and overcome.
 - ▶ expert knowledge vs. lay knowledge
 - ▶ Do not use “Cluster”, “Overshoot”, “Lockdown” without translation.
 - ▶ attacking invisible enemy
 - ▶ Be afraid but in a proper way, but how?
 - ▶ solidarity via social network
 - ▶ Keep some distance from authoritarianism, dictatorship...

Academic Questions possibly related to practice

- hoarding behavior
 - How to persuade not to do?
- Isolation, human-machine interaction
 - AI? Through network?
- Culture, collective identities
- Philosophical - What is this anyway? Spiritual response?

I would like to ask you

- 1. Are there any researchers who are conducting any ethnographic research around you?
 - 2. Are you familiar with any academic network?
 - Shall we establish one?
- 